At StubHub, our mission is to bring the joy of life to fans globally. We're the world's largest ticket marketplace, and we make sure that the events where you want to be are never sold out. At StubHub, we are: Owners We carry the ball. We act as one team, in it together. We live above the line as optimists and with a solution mindset. We are fully accountable for solving problems, both our own pieces and the whole. Fan First We are the fans' biggest fan. We are the fan and the voice of our fans in everything we do. Driven We push past the finish line, aggressively prioritize, and focus on what matters most. We debate, decide, commit, and deliver. Inventive We play a new chord; we celebrate progress over perfection and learnings as much as success. We're agile because there is always more than one way. Courageous We take big swings. We show up for challenges with resilience and persistence. We take risks, embrace failure as a path to learning, and speak up when we have a different opinion. Diverse and Inclusive We harmonize. We assume positive intent, trust, and empower others; bring a global mindset and seek out alternative viewpoints.

Main functions

Design and build high-quality software taking into account extensibility, throughput, and scalability among others. Adopt the KISS principle. Cover your code with tests. Pair review. Every piece of code is reviewed by your peers before merging. Be the owner of your code and responsible for pushing it to production. Follow Agile values and principles. We break product development work into small increments, so we can add value sooner. Be data-driven. We use metrics to guide our development and validate new functionalities. Work with CI / CD pipelines. We don't like wasting time with manual, error-prone deployment work.

Experience in other languages and frameworks like Python, Scala, Groovy, Grails, and Kotlin is desirable. Experience in other technologies like Redis, Elastic Search, Kibana, RabbitMQ.
